

Volunteering

in Germany, June-October 2026

A construction camp is a two-week long voluntary work exchange in a chosen project. A group of 8-12 people from European countries works together on a construction site. At least one trained expert supervises the volunteers during the 40 working hours per week.

You will:

- gain practical construction experience
- engage in a meaningful project
- widen your horizon and grow personally
- experience German food, language, mentality

No previous experience is required to take part. You should be motivated to try out new things and be physically in a good shape.

In the camps sleeping, accommodation and food is included

You are accident insured through the Bauorden during the camps in Germany

During the weekend you will have time to relax and explore

Meet people from other backgrounds, do things together and find new friends

Travel between the camps is usually by train, simple to self-organize

Bauorden will pay a subsidy for travel costs of 250€ per volunteer, if you join 3 or more camps

All volunteers receive a certificate of participation from the Bauorden
