Bon appétit

Bon appétit is a 7-day Erasmus+ seminar that will take place in France, bringing together 20 young Europeans to explore the connection between food, sustainability, and creativity through cooking together.

The program includes workshops, outdoor activities, and group projects to raise environmental awareness about food/cooking practices and build skills in creative thinking, teamwork, and cultural exchange. The experience aims to foster personal growth and active engagement in making changes regarding how we choose and prepare food.

Objectives:

The focus of this project will be on raising awareness of sustainable food practices and how to make changes in the everyday habits regarding how we choose food that has health and environmental impact.

In addition we will also put accent on the intercultural aspect, sharing our traditions around the home meals, practices and recipes as a way to learn more about each culture.

Methodology:

The project follows a non-formal education approach, combining experiential learning, creative expression, and group reflection in the kitchen. Key methods include:

- Workshops that aim to question, explore and reflect on the practices of sustainability in the kitchen.
- Collective cooking that boosts team-work and "thinking outside of the box" by giving cooking challenges to the different teams.
- Activities that focus on discovering the different cultures and traditions around food.
- Collaborative group projects that promote creativity, cooperation, and decision-making on the subject of food preparation and cooking.
- Daily reflection sessions which will give participants the opportunity to reflect upon and give feedback on the day's activities.
